

Dances with Wolves

Please listen and ponder Dances with Wolves Podcast #34

The culture of Native America, and the remnant that is on this land, has some real benefits as a model or as an example to solve problems. In this breakout session, we will experience firsthand how to resolve a concern or problem using the "Dances with Wolves" method.

Everyone who wants to participate in the circle will randomly draw out a stone. Whoever draws the black button will be the "chief." Whoever draws out the red stone, they will be the "medicine man." The medicine man will give the prayerful and religious viewpoint, confining themselves entirely to just that.

Everyone else who draws a white stone is simply a member of the council that gets to speak. And if someone would like to observe but not to speak, they needn't draw a stone.

Come prepared to suggest a problem or concern within your community that we will select to discuss. We hope to learn that within community, no one gets to control. Within community, authority is equally distributed.
